

Opened in 1903, the Colonial is reported to be one of the oldest opera houses in Pennsylvania and the only surviving of four once existing in the borough. It is the last theatre of its kind in Chester County. Since its purchase in 1997 by the Association for the Colonial Theatre (ACT), the theatre has been re-opened, renovations have been made, and plans are underway for continuing and improving on the schedule of art and independent films, children's programs and classics.
